Press Release BIOB/2009/02A – 11th June 2009

BioBridge celebrates 20 years of innovation consultancy.....

BioBridge Ltd, the Cambridge-based independent life science consultancy, was founded in 1989. The drive behind this was to help clients across a broad range of sectors to grapple with regulatory and other barriers to bringing innovations to the market. Since then, BioBridge has worked with over 100 clients from individuals to giant corporations through start-ups and SMEs to governments, spread over the world from Japan via Europe to the East coast of America. BioBridge also offers market analysis, acquisition audit and due diligence and has been at the forefront of biotechnology and life science advances, from a ground-breaking report for Frost&Sullivan on biotechnology in animal breeding and production to current involvement in stimulating the latest in green and blue biotech, including metagenomics business prospects and bioenergy from the sea.

Mr Meredith Lloyd-Evans, CEO of BioBridge Ltd, said “Since we started, we have been able to confirm the importance of a regulatory background in contributing to business development and market strategy. For those product types that are regulated, sometimes heavily so, an input of regulatory knowledge at an early stage is vital to making sound business decisions. This is in addition to our actual regulatory work with industry, where we have been involved in crop biotechnology, tissue engineering, animal health, medical devices and industrial biotechnology. We are very grateful to our clients for their support, especially our long-term relationships stretching from 6 to 18 years. BioBridge looks forward to celebrating another 20 years of helping and supporting innovation and entrepreneurial endeavours when 2029 comes round!”

Meredith was Board Member and secretary of the British Institute of Regulatory Affairs, the precursor of TOPRA, where he helped pave the way for the merger with ESRA and the establishment of BIRA North as an active regional group, and founded the Biotechnology and IT special interest Groups.
