- Do you want to work in a business sector that can influence the health and well-being of millions of people?
- Do you want to be able to constantly extend your scientific and legal knowledge?
- Do you want to work with intelligent, driven colleagues on projects that challenge your thinking and allow you to stretch yourself?
- Do you want to exercise personal skills in a role that has exciting career opportunities to the highest level?

If you think a career in healthcare Regulatory Affairs could be for you, then this is the guide to read before you go any further! Due to popular demand TOPRA – the European Regulatory Affairs professional organisation – has pooled together a wide variety of experiences and advice from professionals who already work in Regulatory Affairs. Our contributors range from Vice Presidents in industry with years of regulatory experience to professionals who have just started on the regulatory career ladder. We have perspectives from pharmaceuticals, medical technologies, veterinary, consultants and regulators.

Regulatory Affairs is an international endeavour and there are great opportunities to travel and work abroad. However, the country where you are based, type of company you work for or your specialty will shape your day-to-day working environment. Although our content is focused on the European regulatory sector, the experiences of Regulatory Affairs share common threads as you will read.

This booklet is aimed at graduates and postgraduates looking to enter the healthcare regulatory world – be it in pharmaceuticals, medical technologies or veterinary sectors. Whichever specialty you choose, this dynamic environment provides an interesting, challenging and rewarding career for those who have the drive, the right qualities and qualifications. The TOPRA Guide to Careers in Regulatory Affairs will help to get you on the right track and TOPRA itself can help to support you as you make your first steps in your new career. ### Evaluating Medicines – Perspectives from A European Regulatory Authority

Edited by: DS Slijkerman, JM van Ree, RTW Meijer and EMA Breeveld

Published by: TOPRA Publishing, London, UK

Book: Paperback, 116 pages

Price: £25, €30, US$40

ISBN: 978-0-9564943-0-6

Topics include:

- How medicinal products get onto the market
- European market for medicinal products
- Centralised registration and the role of the national authorities

TOPRA Publishing's first book is a collaboration with the Medicines Evaluation Board of The Netherlands (Dutch MEB). Evaluating Medicines was originally published in 2008 in Dutch under the title Openheid van zaken – De werkzaamheden van het College ter Beoordeling van Geneesmiddelen.

The authors come from a wide variety of backgrounds and expertise and offer valuable insight into the world of medicines. In this concise publication they explain in simple terms, the intricate nature of European Regulatory Affairs in order for this complex process to be understood and appreciated.

The book has been updated, translated into English and published by TOPRA Publishing so that it can reach a wider readership. It is aimed at anyone who wants to understand what the work of a leading European regulatory authority is really about.

Although written with the lay person in mind, this book has something to teach those who are starting a career in Regulatory Affairs, those who work outside of the European system and need to understand it more fully, and even experienced EU regulatory professionals who would like to have a view from inside one of our leading agencies.

The translated version has not altered the original esprit, but provides an updated text which retains the clarity of the original. The authors express their own views candidly, which are not necessarily those of the MEB or TOPRA, in a way that will greatly add to an appreciation of the work of a busy EU agency. Although written from the perspective of those who work in just one of the EU member states, the issues and challenges they discuss are relevant across the region.
